

KAYAN FOR YEMEN ♦ CIVIC PROFILE

From Aden, for Aden.

The civic profile of Kayan for Yemen — our civic arm. A working company giving back through work itself: not charity, but a path. Cohorts carried from training to a first job, under a sponsor name, reported by name and number.

I ♦ WHAT KAYAN FOR YEMEN IS

Our civic arm.

Kayan for Yemen is the civic arm of Kayan. It carries cohorts of young Yemeni talent from training to real work, under a sponsor name, and stands with the city as it rebuilds. It is how a working company gives back through work itself — not charity, but a path.

Kayan for Yemen is not a programme attached to Kayan. It is the civic dimension of how Kayan operates. Every commercial project Kayan delivers strengthens the institution that delivers civic outcomes. Every civic cohort Kayan trains strengthens the talent pool that delivers commercial results. The two are bound together by design — and that binding is what makes the model work where pure charity and pure commerce have both struggled.

WHAT IT DOES Carries cohorts to work Sponsored cohorts trained, verified, and absorbed into Managed Delivery. The journey from first day of training to first paid engagement, under one institution.	WHAT IT STANDS FOR Standing with the city Aden is rebuilding. Kayan for Yemen is one of the city's instruments — not a foreign aid programme, not a charity, but a local institution that puts local talent on the path to work.
HOW IT REPORTS Name and number, never pity Impact is told by what graduates now do — not by what they once lacked. A trained designer becomes a working designer. The story is the work.	HOW IT OPERATES Without administrative extraction No administration fee on civic engagements. Donor funds flow to talent and documented programme costs. Kayan absorbs the coordination cost as institutional contribution.

II ♦ HOW K4Y WORKS

Cohorts, carried to work.

A Kayan for Yemen cohort is not a training event. It is a journey from intake to a first job, under a sponsor name, with the result reported back by name and number. Four steps, one closed chain.

I Intake

A cohort of fifteen to thirty Yemeni participants is recruited against documented criteria. Inclusion targets are operational: at least fifty percent women and IDP-status participants per cohort. Selection is by capability, not by category.

II Training

Six to twelve weeks through Kayan Forge. Curriculum designed around verified market demand — actual scopes that Managed Delivery has been receiving, not aspirational subjects. Practical, project-based, with regular assessment against published rubrics.

III Verification & absorption

On completion, graduates enter the Trust Ladder at T1 or T2 and are absorbed into Managed Delivery teams on real client engagements — under a financial guarantee, with senior team-lead supervision, and with a proof-of-delivery record at acceptance. The first job is structured, paid, and recorded.

IV Reporting

Within two weeks of cohort completion, the sponsor receives an Impact Report. Numbers: how many joined, how many completed, how many reached real work, the placement rate, the value delivered per person placed. One story: a graduate, by name, with consent, described by what they now do.

III ♦ WHAT THE SPONSOR RECEIVES

By name and number.

A Kayan for Yemen sponsor receives the result the way it should be told — by name and number. Not anecdote. Not claim. Not pity. The cohort, the figures, one story, and what comes next.

IN THE REPORT The numbers, verified Joined the cohort. Completed the training. Reached real work. Placement rate. Value delivered per person placed. The figures are reconciled by Finance and signed by the Chief Executive before issue.	IN THE REPORT One story, by consent A graduate, named with their consent, described by what they now do — not by what they once lacked. One face, looking forward. Never a before-and-after of hardship.
IN THE RECOGNITION Your name on the journey On the cohort, on the certificate, in the telling of the story. The sponsor's name is carried throughout the journey, not appended at the end.	IN THE NEXT STEP First access to hire The talent the sponsor backed is ready and verified. Sponsors who want to hire from the cohort they funded receive first access — at the same Kayan rate card, with the same financial-guarantee protections.

Three ways to sponsor

A sponsor may carry a full cohort end-to-end, with the sponsor name on the whole journey from first day to first job. A sponsor may back a number of named seats within a cohort, supporting specific places. A sponsor may stand with Kayan for Yemen across cohorts as a city partner, named beside the work in Aden over multiple cohorts. Every form receives the same discipline of reporting.

We tell the story by the work — not by what was once lacking.

IV ♦ WHY ADEN, WHY NOW

Built where resilience is not optional.

We are from this city. Aden is a place full of talent that needs only a path. Kayan for Yemen stands alongside the government's and partners' efforts to rebuild Aden — not as a foreign aid arm, but as a local institution doing the institutional work the city needs.

Aden has been counted out too many times. Kayan for Yemen is a deliberate, quiet answer to that — a place where the city's young people receive serious training, serious verification, and serious work, under a serious institution. The civic arm of a working company does what charity alone cannot: it produces graduates who are not beneficiaries but professionals, working at a market rate, with a credential that travels.

The reason this is the right moment is also clear. The Yemeni talent pool has never been the constraint. The constraint has been the absence of an institution that converts talent into market-priced work under a credential the market trusts. That institution now exists. Sponsors who back Kayan for Yemen are not funding training for its own sake — they are funding the closing of a chain that has been broken for a decade.

A city full of talent that only needs a path. We help build that path.

What Kayan for Yemen aligns to

Kayan for Yemen advances five Sustainable Development Goals as an operating consequence — decent work and economic growth, quality education, gender equality, reduced inequalities, and partnerships for the goals. Each linkage is built into the way Kayan for Yemen works, not asserted after the fact. The Forge cohort is the SDG 4 instrument. The absorption pipeline is the SDG 8 instrument. The inclusion targets are the SDG 5 and SDG 10 instruments. The partnership model is the SDG 17 instrument. One institution, five goals, one chain.

V ♦ WHAT K4Y WILL NOT DO

A civic standard, by design.

Kayan for Yemen is bound by the same constitutional discipline as the commercial side of Kayan — and by additional commitments specific to civic work. These constraints are stated explicitly so a sponsor knows exactly what they are funding.

I No administrative extraction from civic funding

No administration fee is taken from civic engagements. Donor funds flow to talent and documented programme costs. Kayan absorbs the coordination cost as institutional contribution. The sponsor's money goes where the sponsor's name goes.

II No reporting by attendance

Kayan for Yemen does not substitute attendance for outcomes. The headline number is always how many reached real work — not how many filled a seat. A cohort that attends but does not place is a cohort that has not delivered.

III No story without consent

Graduates are never featured without explicit, recorded consent. Stories describe people by what they do — never by what they lack. No before-and-after framing. No pity narrative.

IV No exclusion by category

Selection is by capability — never by category. Persons of every ability are full participants, not a separate programme. The door to Kayan for Yemen is one width and everyone walks through it the same.

V No waiver of constitutional rules

A sponsorship that requires waiving Kayan's constitutional rules — financial guarantee as liability, dual approval, banking channels only, ten-year retention — is a sponsorship that cannot proceed. The civic side carries the same spine as the commercial side.

Standing, working, named. That is the result. Anything less is not the work we do.

VI ♦ STAND WITH US

Carry a cohort.

Choosing a cohort to sponsor takes one conversation. Choose the size, agree the design, agree the inclusion targets and the reporting cadence, and begin. The first cohort can begin within eight weeks of partnership signature. The first report reaches the sponsor within two weeks of cohort completion.

What a conversation covers

The sponsor describes the population they wish to back — a geographic focus, a skill domain, a particular emphasis on women or IDP-status participants, or simply a cohort the city most needs at this moment. Kayan for Yemen describes what is operationally feasible against current Forge capacity, current Managed Delivery absorption capacity, and current Trust Ladder verification throughput. A draft cohort design follows within five working days. A signed agreement can be in place within twenty-one days if the sponsor is ready.

What the sponsor commits to

The sponsor commits to the cohort funding, the inclusion targets, and the recognition language. Kayan for Yemen commits to the curriculum, the verification, the absorption, the reporting cadence, and the operating discipline. The commitment is mutual: the sponsor's name is carried through the journey; Kayan for Yemen delivers the result by name and number. Each side carries its part.

Cohorts carried from training to a first job, under a sponsor name. Carrying your name once brings a Yemeni cohort to real work. Carrying your name again brings the next one.
