

COMPANY PROFILE · ADEN, YEMEN

The talent was always here. The system was not.

An integrated managed-talent institution — building the verification, governance, and trust infrastructure that lets Yemeni capability be found, trusted, and delivered with recourse.

Why Kayan exists.

For years I watched capable people in Aden lose work they were qualified to do — not for lack of skill, but for lack of a system willing to vouch for them. A client abroad would ask one fair question, and there was never a good answer to it.

That question was always the same: how do I know this person will deliver, and what is my recourse if they do not? It is not a cynical question. It is the question any serious buyer asks anywhere in the world. Yemen simply never built the institution that could answer it.

Kayan is that institution. Not a directory, not a marketplace that walks away when something goes wrong, but a structure that verifies a person before the work, manages the delivery during it, and stands behind the outcome after. We hold the payment until the work is signed off. We carry the standing, so that no single person has to carry all the risk alone.

The talent was always here. What was missing was the system. We are building it — carefully, and to last.

— Maher

One question, three missing systems.

Yemeni talent does not fail on capability. It fails at the moment a stranger must decide whether to trust it — because three systems that exist elsewhere were never built here.

How do I know this person will deliver, and what is my recourse if they do not?

Verification

No trusted way to confirm who a person is and whether they can do what they claim.

Governance

No defined scope, no enforced standard, no path to recourse when delivery falls short.

Trust infrastructure

No institution to hold payment, manage delivery, and record what actually happened.

Kayan builds all three as one institution. The result is simple to state and hard to copy: a verified record of who delivers in Yemen, owned by the institution that created the trust.

♦ WHAT KAYAN IS

Four lines, one institution.

Each line earns on its own terms, and each strengthens the others. Together they form a single engine for verified, accountable delivery.

The Hub

A serviced coworking and e-working space on the Aden Corniche — reliable power, full connectivity, and a professional presence. The physical anchor of the institution.

Managed Delivery

Delivery teams executing client projects under a financial-guarantee model. A defined scope of work, staged quality gates, and payment released only against signed-off delivery.

Kayan Forge

Capacitation and mobilisation — preparing verified talent for real engagements. Not abstract training, but readiness aligned to genuine delivery.

The Café

Hospitality that funds footfall and anchors the Hub in the daily life of the community — the most human front door an institution can have.

◆ THE KAYAN CARD

Standing you can carry.

The Kayan Card is the visible form of an invisible truth — that a person has been verified, has delivered, and is backed by an institution.

Who can stand behind this person, and what is that standing worth?

For verified talent, the Card is proof of a record earned through delivery. For a client, it is shorthand for assurance — a signal that Kayan has confirmed, managed, and will stand behind. The Card does not replace the institution; it points to it.

Each Card reflects a verified tier, rising as a profile delivers. Standing is never declared — it is accumulated, one signed-off engagement at a time.

◆ WHY IT HOLDS

Defensible by design.

Kayan's advantage is not being first. It is owning what accumulates and cannot be reproduced — a record and a reputation that deepen with every engagement.

The data moat

Every delivered engagement records who delivered, how well, and against what scope. This verified history is proprietary and compounding. A competitor can copy the idea; they cannot copy the record.

The trust moat

Institutional standing is earned slowly and across many engagements. Clients return to the institution that carried the recourse — and that relationship is not for sale.

The learning loop

Each engagement teaches the institution who to trust and how to deliver better. Verification informs delivery; delivery deepens verification. The loop turns experience into an asset no newcomer can shortcut.

◆ THE PEOPLE BEHIND IT

A founding team, accountable by design.

Kayan is a Ministry-filed institution with a defined ownership structure and clear lines of accountability. Authority is held where it belongs, and disclosed where it matters.

Founder	Role	Mandate
Maher Faisal Saeed Farea	Founder & CEO	Strategy, institution-building, and final accountability
Tariq Ahmed Al-Mukhdari	Co-Founder & Finance Lead	Finance, controls, and the financial-guarantee discipline
Mohamed Faisal Saeed Farea	Partner & Kayan Forge Lead	Capacitation and mobilisation within Forge
Ali Qaed Ahmed	Partner	Founding partner

How authority is governed

Every payment above a defined threshold requires dual approval. Banking runs through regulated institutions in Aden — one for operations, one for the financial guarantee — with an absolute prohibition on informal value transfer. The controls that make Kayan trustworthy to a client are the same controls that govern it from within.

Behind every successful project, a Kayan.
